10/30/2022 The Organ - Feature Album Review

"What we need to do here is make sure this music doesn't just end up in the hands of the beard growers and the chin strokers, these fine pieces are far far too vitally exciting to just be left in an obscure corner over there, they really should be heard by all. The world would be a far far better place if labels like Skin Graft were the mainstream and songs like these were on the daytime radios of taxi drivers and shop workers. Not that there are many record labels like Skin Graft, indeed are there any? Has anyone stuck to their guns and been so consistently unflinchingly rewarding as Skin Graft have been over such a long time?... (continued at link)

10/2022: The WIRE album review:

Sounds To Make You Shudder! / Various / Skin Graft CD/DL/MC

<https://www.thewire.co.uk/issues/465>

Tangible as it felt, the funny thing about Haddonfield, Illinois - the setting of John Carpenter's Halloween - was that it was all fake. The town doesn't exist, and the film was shot 2000 miles west of the state, the crew hauling in bin bags full of autumn leaves. Somehow, the film still conjures a distinctive sense of the Midwest as a site of suburban dread, its synth score melting imagined streets into deathscapes haunted by something blank and evil. Spinning the "Sounds To Make You Shudder!" compilation, from the Illinois based Skin Graft label, Carpenter's nightmare is supplanted by the real thing. You can feel a sense of regional horror, a creeping, surreal thread that runs through the morbid blues of Chicago band Tijuana Hercules, the burbling synths of Missouri's Azita Youssefi and even the abstract spookytronics of a Chicago born expat like Jim O' Rourke. It's a thick atmosphere, and sometimes all you need to capture it is a couple of weirdos and a tape deck. On "Happy Halloween", the first release from Strangulated Beatoffs in a decade, a ghoulish slab of stoner concrete is spun entirely from Stan Seitrich and Fritz Noble's echoing voices. Not every act on this set hails from the region. One of the standout cuts is from a Berlin based noise punk trio Cuntroaches, who are new to me (and seem capable of causing instantaneous brain melt) The bulk of the disc, though, captures the various mutations that the distinctively abrasive local variety of no wave has taken in the last decade. The Flying Luttenbachers return with "Violence Labyrinth", a dense grid of guitar shredding, while Lovely Little Girls bring an unlikely hybrid of Swedish extreme metal and funk, squeezing out an oozing, saxophone-heavy cover of Celtic Frost's "Procreation Of The Wicked".
